Lon Po Po: A Red-Riding Hood Story From China

Lon Po Po is a Chinese story that is similar to the Western tale of Little Red Riding Hood. It is about a young girl named Lon Po Po who is visited by a wolf disguised as her grandmother. The wolf asks to eat some of the girl's food, and eventually tries to eat the girl herself. The wolf is tricked by the girl's interaction with her grandmother and a group of children, and is finally caught in a trap.

Ed Young's adaptation of the story is rich in Chinese culture and tradition. The illustrations are detailed and vibrant, capturing the essence of the story. The text is accessible for children, while still being engaging for adults. The story is a reminder of the dangers that can lurk in the world, and the importance of staying vigilant.

The story is a classic example of the power of storytelling to teach moral lessons. It is a tale of courage, wisdom, and resourcefulness, and teaches children the importance of relying on their instincts and the strength of numbers. It is a story that will stay with children long after they have finished reading it.

Overall, Lon Po Po: A Red-Riding Hood Story From China is a wonderful example of how stories from different cultures can be adapted and shared to teach valuable lessons. It is a curriculum piece that can be used in schools to teach children about Chinese culture and tradition, while also promoting moral development.

The book has received excellent reviews from both children and adults. It has been praised for its优美插画和生动的故事叙述，以及它所传递的教育信息。The book is highly recommended for children of all ages, and is a perfect addition to any story collection.
